

Exploring the dieback of western redcedar as a symbol for inequities in urban communities

Can the dieback of western redcedar be a symbol to raise awareness about the local consequences of climate change and the inequities in urban landscapes?

More information at <https://foresthealth.org/equity>